

Graduate studies SOCIOLOGY

THE UNIVERSITY

Acadia University is located in Wolfville, Nova Scotia. The University sustains a vibrant culture of scholarly inquiry by building on the outstanding talents of its students, faculty, and staff, by maintaining focus on its core academic disciplines, and by fostering a collaborative approach to research excellence.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT

In order to ensure consideration for Acadia fellowships, scholarships, and assistantships, applicants are encouraged to submit their applications by February 1.

THE PROGRAM

Acadia University offers programs of study leading to a masters degree in sociology. The Department of Sociology specializes in political economy, societal development, gender, cultural diversity, work, methods, and social theory.

Students normally participate in an eight-month schedule of courses, seminars, and thesis preparation that includes some opportunity to gain teaching experience. The remaining four months of the one-year program are devoted to the completion of a thesis.

FACULTY

Z. ABRAMSON, PhD (York) Health and Health Care; Families; Research Methods; Women's Studies.

J. J. BRITTAIN, PhD (New Brunswick) Critical Development Studies; Political Economy; Social Change and Revolution.

K. BOWEN, DPhil (Oxford) Ethnic and Race Relations; Sociology of Religion.

M. HORGAN, PhD (York) Cultural Sociology; Classical and Contemporary Social Theory; Urban Sociology.

H.A. KITCHIN, PhD (Carleton) Addiction Studies; Women's Studies; Crime and Deviance; Qualitative Methods and Research Ethics.

B.K. MOORE, MA (Acadia) Women and Gender Studies; Sociology of Families; Racialization and Ethnicity.

A.M. POWERS, PhD (SUNY at Stony Brook) Social and Economic Organizations; Gender, Identity and Symbolism; North Atlantic Maritime Cultures.

P. RIPPEYOUNG, PhD (Iowa) Gender, Work, and Family; Social Stratification; Research Methods and Statistics.

R.J. SACOUMAN, PhD (Toronto) Social Movements and Human Development; Political Economy and Social Theory; Consequential Marxism.

A.G. THOMSON, PhD (Cambridge) Social Theory; Justice and Law; Marxism.

Department of Sociology, Acadia University, Wolfville, NS B4P 2R6

Email: sociology@acadiau.ca Phone: 902.585.1493 Fax: 902.585.1070

Website: sociology.acadiau.ca